PLM2006 Second Call for Papers

Dear Colleagues,

The 37th Poznań Linguistic Meeting is approaching. It will take place in Poznań, Poland, between the 20th and 23rd of April, 2006 (Thursday-Sunday).

As usual, the Meeting will be organised by the School of English, Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań, in association with the Poznań College of Modern Languages. The leitmotif of this edition is: "Reaching far: Distant countries, distant disciplines".

Programme

There have been several noteworthy additions to our Programme.

We are delighted to announce that the opening session of the Meeting will feature Peter Ladefoged with a plenary talk on "What's a possible speech sound? The cognitive and physiological limits of spoken language".

Peter Ladefoged will also present a second talk on endangered languages.

Martin Haspelmath will give a demo of the computer version of the World Atlas of Language Structures as well as present a talk in the Typology session.

On 19 April, there will also be a special session on the occasion of the 70th birthday of Jacek Fisiak.

In addition to the above, the following sessions are included on the programme:

- Southern Hemisphere Englishes;
- Language and medicine;
- In search of the logic of communication;
- History of English dialects;
- Linguistic typology;
- Text technology;
- Syntax;
- National stereotypes, national identities in language and text;
- Phonology.

All the latest information is available at: <http://elex.amu.edu.pl/ifa/plm/programme.html>

Paper submission

We welcome submissions for the above sessions as well as abstracts of any other papers.

Each submission must be accompanied by an abstract in English, with a length of about 500 words.

General abstract submission deadline: 15 January 2006. (Note: Submission deadlines for individual sessions may vary slightly.)

Notification of acceptance: 15 February 2006.

Detailed submission guidelines are available from: <http://elex.amu.edu.pl/ifa/plm/submissions.html>
